A YEAR IN REVIEW

Korean Air Lines Flight 007

In the early morning darkness of September 1, a Korean Air Lines 747 was hit by a Soviet air-to-air missile. Twelve minutes later the big jet plunged into the Sea of Japan, killing all 269 passengers and crew (78 are pictured on these pages). Six days after the crash, 100,000 people assembled to mourn in a Seoul stadium, including the woman above. U.S., Japanese and Russian navies searched nine weeks for the flight recorder that might have explained why the plane strayed into Soviet airspace; the sea yielded only shoes, clothing, toys and other personal evidence of the tragedy. The stark gallery of some of these artifacts on the fol-
